Frederick H Pratt and Sons Complete Cycle Engineers

Alvin J E Smith

Frederick H Pratt and Sons Complete Cycle Engineers by Alvin Smith

Growing up with Claud Butler, marrying his sister, and becoming a respected frame builder, what more could a young man want? Read how Frederick Pratt reacted and then how he went on to build up his own dream machines. This is an account of a small bike company and shop that was set up in the 1950's in leafy Surrey. A quirky, sad, but half humorous story of the Frederick marque with full records of the bicycles and copies of the famous Frederick Jack Knife leaflets.

74 pages of text and illustrations with an attractive laminated coloured cover. Order for Christmas
